

CALLING ALL WOMEN!

Could your voice be added to other women's voices for Small Acts of Resistance ?

Islington Peoples Theatre is looking for women with experiences of being marginalised, unheard, and who find themselves wanting and expecting more from 'Broken Britain'. Small Acts of Resistance is an applied theatre-based research project combining feminist practice, applied theatre and creative activism.

#SmallActsOfResistance

Small Acts of Resistance is an applied theatre-based research project combining feminist practice, applied theatre and creative activism. We welcome women with experiences of: addiction and recovery (who are now in recovery), homelessness, survivors of domestic abuse, the criminal justice system, mental health issues, single parenting on benefits, disability issues & those looking to exit sex work. We are particularly looking to engage Black, Asian, Ethnic minority women & working-class white women.

You should have an interest in the creative arts, as this is an applied theatre-based project using drama processes such as improvisation, devising and creative writing. You should also be keen to learn new skills, form a network with other women in the borough, and want to use your voice to make a difference!

You will need to be available on 1 day in each of the 3 blocks below.

You will be working 3 days in total for 5 hours each day plus an extra hour for lunch*.

These five hours each day are paid work.
